PRE-CONFERENCE WORKSHOP PROPOSALS BEING ACCEPTED FOR 2018 FASCIA RESEARCH CONGRESS

The Fifth International Fascia Research Congress in Berlin will be preceded by two types of workshops. Pre-Congress workshops related to clinical and assessment methodologies will be held November 13, 2018, the day before the Congress, at the Urania Center in Berlin. In addition, an anatomy workshop will take place November 10-12 at the Plastinarium Center in Guben.

Proposals for pre-conference workshops will be accepted through October 10, 2017. Selection will be based on scientific relevance as supported by current research literature and clinical perspectives in relationship to human fasciae.

The International Fascia Research Congress (FRC) will present the latest and most relevant fascia science including plenary and breakout sessions. There is a great deal of interest in fascia research from the clinical community whose methods and hypotheses center on human fascia. An important continuing initiative of the FRC is to foster understanding and collaboration among scientists working in fascia research and the various clinical professionals who address fasciae in their work with clients and patients.

Workshop proposals can be submitted at <http://fasciacongress.org/2018-congress/2018-workshop-proposals/>.

The FRC was created by a multidisciplinary committee of basic science researchers and practicing health care professionals whose respective fields share a common focus and interest in the human body's soft connective tissue matrix. Previous Congresses and workshops were held in 2007, 2009, 2012, and 2015.
